

I have XM satellite radio. I use it constantly and find the quality, variety and content to be excellent. The traffic and weather channels are valuable (and constant, as opposed to from time-to-time) and I find them very useful. When I avoid a traffic jam, I am saving energy, a real concern with gasoline prices over $2/gallon. I am paying for these services, and would not want to have them taken away from me, especially at the behest of the NAB.

Despite my satellite radio, I do still use my broadcast radio from time to time.

I respectfully urge the FCC to reject NAB's petition 04-160.
